Madison Metropolitan School District (Dane County K-12 districts) and the University of Wisconsin System President Tommy Thompson (UW System) recently launched a joint initiative to deploy 450 Smart Restart (System President Tommy Thompson) computers to 15 high schools in Dane County to provide students with the necessary tools to succeed academically. The initiative is part of the University of Wisconsin System’s (UW System) ongoing efforts to support students in their academic pursuits.

The Smart Restart program provides students with access to high-quality educational resources, including academic software, digital textbooks, and online learning platforms. By equipping students with these resources, the initiative aims to enhance their academic performance and prepare them for success in college and careers.

System President Tommy Thompson emphasized the importance of providing students with the necessary tools to succeed in their education. "We are committed to ensuring that every student has access to the resources they need to succeed academically," he said. "The Smart Restart program is a significant step towards achieving this goal."
