Shared governance

Shared governance (shared governance) is a form of collaborative governance in which the faculty, students, and staff of a university work together to make decisions about the institution. This can include decisions about academic and university staff, academic and non-academic boards, and budgetary matters.

Shared governance is often used in higher education institutions to ensure that all stakeholders have a say in the decision-making process. It is a way of ensuring that the needs and interests of all members of the university community are represented.

In addition to shared governance, there are also other forms of collaborative governance, such as governance by proxy and governance by consensus. These forms of governance can be used in combination to ensure that the institution is run in a way that is fair and just for all members of the community.

Overall, shared governance is an important aspect of higher education institutions, as it helps to ensure that the institution is run in a way that is fair and just for all members of the community.
