In July, UW–Madison will provide a 2 percent wage increase to eligible employees under the 2023–2025 pay plan. Faculty, Academic Staff, University Staff, Limited Appointees, Research Associates, and Research Interns may be eligible for pay plan.

Who gets these pay increases?

To be eligible to receive the pay increase, individuals must have been employed in their current positions on June 29, 2024 (for employees with 12-month appointments) or August 18, 2024 (for employees with 9-month appointments). Employees must also have completed any training that is required for their position and met performance expectations as identified in their last performance evaluation. Additional eligibility criteria may apply.

When are the pay increases effective?

The 2 percent increase will be effective June 30, 2024, for employees with 12-month appointments, and these employees will see the increase on the earnings statement for July 25, 2024. For employees with 9-month (academic year) appointments, the increase will be effective August 19, 2024, and will appear on the earnings statement for September 5, 2024. Employees who are receiving the pay increase will receive a written communication informing them of their new pay rate.
